STUDENT ACTORS WIN LAURELS IN ANNUAL OPERETTA

"Will Tell" Faultlessly Presented Before Usual Large Audience.

CHORUS IS EXCEPTIONAL

An appreciative audience witnessed the initial performance of the High School operetta, "Will Tell," presented in the auditorium last night. The tuneful playlet was produced in a manner that was a real tribute to those who took part and even more to those who aided in its production.

The operetta, modeled after the famous opera, "William Tell," has touches of modernism, and the cast of characters was well selected, judged by the ability with which the parts were carried out.

Carl T. Anstine, instructor of music in the High School, directed the musical end of the play and the dramatic side was in charge of Miss Rose Nell Zaring, a High School instructor. Misses Jean B. Armstrong and Florence Kimball were in charge of the costumes. Those of the principals and the boys' chorus were rented but those of the girls' chorus were made at the school. J. E. Robbins of the manual training and Miss Mary Brickman of the art department were in charge of the special scenery made for the play.

The play opened with a scene in the Swiss Alps, where the women, led by Miss Lillian Frank, as Rosa, are lamenting the state of affairs as introduced by Herman Gessler, the tyrannical governor, played by Cemlyn Jobes. The men of Altdorf, the little Swiss town, are absent, with their leader, Will Tell, depicted by Robert Thomas, conspiring. Anna Gessler, whose part is sung by Miss Blanche Bowling, tries to make friends with the women but is actually stoned by urchins of the village until Walter Tell, played by Kenneth Cunningham, comes to her aid. They are mutually attracted. Then Gessler arrives with his guards, prominent among whom are Conrad and Arnold. Thomas Charlesworth and Richard K. Dixon play those parts. Gessler is scandalized and arrests Walter as a spy. The governor's cruelty is a result of bad digestion which always keeps him in an ill-temper.

The tyrant orders the Austrian archducal cap placed on a pole and decrees that the populace must bow to it, leaving Berenger, played by Edison Harmon, in charge. Tell comes in and refuses to curtsey to it. Gessler returns, with Walter Tell, guarded. Then the famous scene, in which Tell is ordered to shoot the apple from his son's head with a bow and arrow is enacted. Berenger is finally involved in a plot to distract the governor's attention while Anna places a transfixed apple on the head of the son. Noticing the unshot arrow in the bow Gessler asks Tell what it is for and he replies "to pierce thy tryant heart if I had

RAY M'CLINTOCK HAS FINE VOICE, SAYS B. G. HARLAN

"One of the finest tenor voices I have heard" were the words in which Byron G. Harlan, phonograph record maker, praised Ray McClintock, local young man, after he had completed the making of a record on the New Edison at the Orpheum Theatre last night. McClintock made his record at 7:30 o'clock. At 9:30 o'clock, Miss Gladys Clark also recorded a number. Miss Genevieve Clark and Mrs. George Santmyer made records yesterday afternoon.

The appearance of Harlan, known the world over, is an added attraction which follows the regular program. A special inducement to patrons of the theatre are checks for $1 which are given to every person attending a performance. In addition to Harlan appear Armstrong, the "man of mystery"; Miss Mabel Loomis, soprano, and Miss Beth Hamilton, violinist.

This afternoon Lester Crawford was to sing and this evening at 7.30 o'clock two local persons, Mrs. Clarence McCormick and Herbert Ellis, will have their voices recorded. At the 9 o'clock show Alex Duncan of Dunbar will sing.

PAINTED A "RARE WHISTLER"

French Artist Later Finds His Work Priced at 150,000 Francs—Much Litigation in Prospect.

A still life painting ascribed to Whistler and priced at 150,000 francs has been declared by the courts to be in reality the work of a French painter, Stanny Stassy. The Frenchman is said to have painted it eighteen years ago in one day on a bet; he then sold it for eighty francs and next saw it as a famous picture with Whistler's name in the corner.

It was the reproduction of the picture in a book on Whistler, in which it was learnedly commented upon as revealing Whistler's peculiar genius, that brought about the expose. M. Stassy and a fellow painter named Behin, it was shown in court, painted the same group of flowers, a vase, a jug and a glass of wine on a wager, with two of their pretty models as judges.

Some time ago when Behin sold his copy, the dealer indignantly charged that it was merely a copy of Whistler's, and for proof showed him the photograph in the book. Behin told Stassy of his experience and the latter searched until he found the picture, which had traveled at increasing prices from dealer to dealer.

Stassy filed suit to recover the picture and have the signature changed, and asked for damages. Experts supported his contention, and the court now has upheld it to the extent of ordering Stassy's signature to replace that of Whistler.

The dealer, who last bought the picture, paying for it 100,000 francs, says he will seek redress from the dealer who sold it to him, and continuous litigation on down the line may result.—New York Tribune.

American Research Associati on

Pennsylvania Survey

AN OPEN LETTER

A controversy has recently arisen between the Geological Department of the State of Pennsylvania, and the American Research Association over the possible volume of recoverable natural gas still held in underground storage within the limits of the State.

The matter at issue is one of great economic importance, and its determination will materially affect the welfare of a great many people The volume of gas involved is, if produced, sufficient to supply the requirements of the State's entire population for a period of forty years Its value, according to estimate, exceeds Nine Billion Dollars.

Some ten months ago, the American Research Association undertook a geological survey of the State of Pennsylvania It is the findings of this survey that has raised the issue with the State's Geological Department.

The controversy is not so much whether or not this huge reserve exists. This, in the light of recent surveys, appears an accepted fact The issue that has been raised is whether or not the deep seated sands, in which this gas has taken present day lodgment, lie sufficiently near the surface to be economically reached by the drill.

The State Geological Department, working from the viewpoint of even formation placement, has taken a negative position, claiming that the sands are too deep to be reached, while the American Research Association has taken the affirmative, they holding that through a series of non-conformity, in formation placement, the drilling depth over certain apex areas has been reduced to one-half that which would rule, were the formation periods laid in even placement.

The factors underlying the controversy hold forth a possibility of such economic consequence that they make of this issue the most important problem now before the people of this State.

According to survey of the American Research Association, there is underlying the Laurel Hill and Chestnut Structures a gas pool containing 31,490 billion feet of gas.

The known pressure is so great that each well drilled to the deep seated sands, in which this gas has taken present day lodgment, should produce, according to estimate in excess of ten million cubic feet daily (The rock pressure already determined is 3,300 pounds to the square inch.)

The volume, according to estimate, is so great that one well producing ten million cubic feet daily for a period of forty years would extract but one-third of 1% of the gas contained in the pool.

The economic features of its extraction are such that the annual earnings from each ten million foot well would amount to ten times the cost of drilling, and in forty years four hundred times the initial development cost.

The outstanding feature now is, that the Standard Oil Company and the American Research Association, are neither one of them awaiting the outcome of the controversy that has been raised The Peoples Gas Company, a subsidiary of the Standard, have two wells drilling; while the American Research Association, through its subsidiary, the Research Development Company, is moving in equipment preparatory to starting their own test well The issue, therefore, should be brought to a definite determination by actual drill tests within the next few months.

The geologic factors present are such that there can be no half way course The test wells now drilling will definitely determine that this gas is recoverable or that it is not recoverable If the issue is favorable, and production holds up to estimate, those participating in expense of development should profit annually to an extent many times the capital invested, and this same earning should continue annually for forty years. While on the other hand, if the issue is found unfavorable, funds expended in development, must, for the greater part, be considered lost.

Having had advance information, through their surveys, the American Research Association today find themselves in a most satisfactory position Their holdings are extensive and comprise the most favored drilling locations in the pool.

Operators desiring to enter the field for development, can receive reports, maps and full data by applying direct to the Association.

Individual investors who may be willing to take a chance on an investment of this class, for the benefit of the larger returns that will accrue, if the issue is successful are extended an opportunity to join with the Association on its own development now under way.

Full information upon request.

THE PEOPLE WANT MORE; MUST PAY MORE.

The members of the Legislature, before whom the problem of raising more money with which to conduct the state government during the ensuing two years looms large and fearsome in its aspects, have a clearer conception of the needs and difficulties of the situation than the folks at home can have. The latter, in their eagerness to have more public conveniences and luxuries, in proportionately the same measure as they strive to obtain both for their private use, apparently give little thought to the fact that these things cost money and still less consideration to the other fact that taxation is the only financial recourse of the state government.

For these reasons it is difficult for the people to understand why there is necessity for the Legislature to devote so much of its time to devising new or increasing the pulling power of old forms of taxation. It seems not to be considered that in the two items of improved roads and better schools alone, both of which the people are insistently demanding be provided, the increase in expenditures is greater than the total income of the Commonwealth a comparatively few years ago. Just what changed conditions mean to the members of the Legislature, who are wrestling with the tax problem, is clearly stated by Representative Thomas M. Whitman in editorial comment in his paper, the Latrobe Bulletin, in which he says:

"We say to ourselves that the Commonwealth did not need to increase taxes every year, back in the old days when as a matter of fact the Commonwealth felt so flush that it actually gave away to the counties, the State tax on personal property.

"Why should it need new taxes now?

"And yet, every one in Pennsylvania possessed of an automobile is demanding improvements to the roads upon which everyone is accustomed to travel. Everyone is complaining about the condition of the highways, improved and unimproved. Everyone wants good roads.

"And good roads cost from $40,000 to $60,000 a mile to build.

"In this one item, the Commonwealth is confronted with a condition that was practically unknown 25 years ago.

"Yet, we wonder why the State must always be looking around for additional revenue.

"Take education. Four or five times as many children go to school today, as went to school 25 years ago. They don't go for but six months in a year. They go for nine months, or 10 months—and every parent wants for his boy or girl the best there is in education.

"Is it any wonder that instead of $4,000,000, the Commonwealth finds itself confronted with the necessity of spending $25,000,000 a year, for educational purposes?

"So the list might be considered, from first to last. Conditions have changed. The people expect more along all lines. They want more, and they are entitled to more.

"But they have to pay for it, to get it."

The members of the Legislature do not want to increase taxation, but if the people insist on having more of everything, there is no way of obtaining it other than paying the price through higher rates or increases in the number of taxes.

By their birthday celebrations the 80-year youngsters are giving new proof that no man is older than he feels, just as the ladies who assist upon these happy occasions show they are no older than they look.

It is hoped that the profuse bloom on the trees in the spring will ripen into fruit that will bring the bloom of health to a profusion cheeks in the fall.

To be up-to-date thieves are now getting up in the air to steal outdoor radio aerials.

"Doctoring" the Pure Food Law.

Philadelphia Bulletin.

[illegible] hard fight for the [illegible] food law, fourteen years ago, Pennsylvania will not favor any letting [illegible] of the bars against the sale of [illegible] or unwholesome food or drink products. Suggestion of an attempt in that direction is made in the amendments proposed to the Criminal Code now under consideration by the House, which would require proof of knowledge on the dealer's part that such articles, sold, or offered for sale, were impure or unwholesome as requisite to conviction.

The qualification of guilt is plainly in contrast with the Pure Food Law of 1909. That Act provides dealers can protect themselves from punishment for such sales, or attempts to sell, only by securing a written guaranty from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber that the food or drink so offered, or sold, is pure, wholesome and properly branded. And even such a written guarantee does not avail the dealer if he continues the sales after warning.

The law that would compel proof of knowledge on the part of every retail dealer concerned in the final act of distribution to the consumer leaves too large an opening for fraud and evasion.

The Act of 1909 is not mentioned for repeal in the general repealing clauses of the suggested Code, and under its terms the public may be protected as in the past. But why, when the entire law of crimes is supposedly in process of clarification and condensation, should there be any enactment of contradictory clauses when one so well protects the public interest?

Return of the Beavers

Pittsburg Post.

Excitement has been created in Somerset county by a report that beavers, after an absence of a century from that region, have taken up their abodes in the Laurel Hill creek, or North Fork tributary of the Youghiogheny river. It is a matter in which all nature-lovers will be interested, and if the report proves to be true Somerset county is to be congratulated, for beavers are a form of wild life worth having.

They have long been listed among the extinct animals of Pennsylvania, although the Game Commission has reintroduced them with success in one or two places. In 1913 a pair were found in Union county, and the female killed by a thoughtless boy. About the last authentic record of the finding of a native beaver in Pennsylvania, preceding the discovery of the Union county specimens, goes back to 1899, when one was seen on Portage creek, near the boundary between Blair and Cambria counties.

They were at one time one of the commonest mammals of the state. The fact that a county and numerous streams, falls and ponds, as well as several towns, are named "Beaver" attests to the frequency with which the animals were encountered.

It would be interesting to know the origin of the Somerset county beavers. Are they descendants of original stock that have remained hidden for many years, or that migrated away from the region and have now returned? Or did they escape from a game preserve?

Wherever they came from, it is to be hoped that they will stay and multiply. For sentimental reasons we would like to have beavers restored to our woodland streams. If they should become so plentiful that absolute protection was not necessary to prevent their being exterminated their furs would make a valuable addition to our commerce. Then, too, they are useful as dam builders, for the ponds that they create serve as reservoirs to keep the creeks from going dry in time of drought.

Just Folks

GRANDMA.

I know what makes a Grandma grand
—she always has a treat,
A cookie or a piece of cake or apple pie to eat.
And when we go to visit her she gets the good things out.
And we don't have to look for more as long as she's about.
Then Ma will say:
"That's all today.
Don't give them any more
You'll make them ill
I know you will
Tonight we'll walk the floor."

A Grandma never punishes or says that we are bad,
She always takes us on her knee and tells us she is glad
To have us racing round the house, and when we get too smart
An' Pa an' Ma are awful cross, she always takes our part.
And once when I
Had told a lie
And had to go to bed
Without my tea,
She came to me
And brought me jam and bread.

Ma says it's funny Grandma acts the way she does today,
When she was Grandma's little girl she couldn't disobey.
Or only eat the things she liked an' get the stomach ache,
Or pick the chocolate frosting off an' never touch the cake,
When she was bad
She always had
The punishment to bear,
But we can be
Much worse than she
An' Grandma doesn't care

Pa says that Grandmas are alike, their job of training's done,
They don't like tears to come along and spoil the children's fun,
They love to see the youngsters eat, an' though it isn't right
They never have to walk the floor or stay up all the night.
An' children know
The times they go
To Grandma's house to play
Though bad they are,
Their Ma and Pa
Can't have a word to say.

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

"Playing Froggie."

"Playing Froggie" is an excellent exercise for the usually weak abdominal muscles of a child. A friend of mine who is a physical training teacher taught the exercise to my little girl as a game. First she places her hands, with fingers toward each other, flat on the floor, stooping in a squat position. Then she jumps both feet backward, touching the toes only—not allowing the knees to touch the floor. Then she returns to the starting position. She has passed her game along, and many an afternoon I find four or five youngsters in the living room having a hilarious time trying the frog game.

chanced to harm my son."

Gessler determines to punish Tell and Anna is sent for poison. The girl substitutes her father's medicine. Gessler alters the sentence to life imprisonment. The Swiss men led by Robert Bohanny as Werner, organize to release Tell. Meanwhile Rosa and Gertrude, the latter played by Gladys Albright, both aspiring to marry Will Tell, find Walter and put it up to him but he gives them the slip. As the plans for Tell's rescue are made he appears and says he made his escape after slaying Gessler with an arrow.

The populace feels sorry, now that the tyrant is dead, and Anna and Walter find a real barrier has come between them. They are lamenting together when Gessler appears and demands to know what they are doing. His indigestion has been cured by a patent pill so that he can no longer act as a tyrant. He insists in shaking hands with Will Tell, saying the arrow struck a box of sandwiches instead of piercing him. Everything is soon happily wound up Tell declines to marry either Rosa or Gertrude who pair off with Conrad and Arnold. Walter and Anna are to be married. Tell is chosen president of the Swiss republic.

Irene Witt, playing the part of Gretchen, Anna's old nurse, did well in her role She sang twice, joined by a chorus.

Leopold Schuler and Maxwell Lizza are Guards Peasants included in the choruses are: Edith Hoffman, Elizabeth Hetrick, Maude Tipton, Quia Evans, Margaret Krurh, Genevieve Gandolfi, Everine Cupp, Mary Elizabeth Smutz Stanley Sudziak, Ralph Black, Joseph Stillwagon, Lloyd Shaner, Ralph Gillo, Paul Sechler, Clarence Yaw, Daniel Smith, Clyde Bellstein, Lillian Vance, Viola Gross, Marie Bufano, Thelma Artis, Marie DeLuca, Helen McCormick, Marion Fenstermacher, Anna Schwenck, Marie Comstock, Geraldine Frutchey, Lyda Tweddell, Mildred Sidaway, Jennie Belle Huey, Florence Groft, Rosa Isola, Dorothy Gibson, Eloise Cable, Paul Carte, Edna Charlesworth.

There may have been high school choruses which sang better than in "Will Tell," but they have not appeared on the high school stage in recent years. The unison was as nearly perfect as one hears in amateur performances, in the opinion of those who heard it The solo parts were excellent throughout.

The operatta will be repeated this evening

"Where to Get You Next Suit"

Yes, you can buy a good looking "ready-to-wear" at about the same price we ask for a good looking, long wearing, right fitting, tailor made suit.

You can have a "ready-to-wear" altered to fit, may be.

Tinkering a "store" suit to make it fit is a mighty ticklish job—about as difficult as re-constructing a busted birds-nest. At best, it usually results in only a temporary, makeshift fit Carried beyond a certain point, alterations often upset the entire balance and fit of even a good "ready-to-wear" suit.

You will never feel quite satisfied with anything but a Spring suit that is cut and tailored precisely to conform to your individual countour and your taste.

The new suitings are in, 500 of them. We shall be glad to have you call and look them over. Come and make us prove all we have said or implied about real tailoring art skill.

Suits $35 and Up.

Among The Churches

FIRST UNITED PRESBYTERIAN—Corner Morton avenue and Pittsburg street. Francis J. Scott, minister. Bible school, 9:45 A. M. Morning worship at 11. The subject of the morning sermon is "The Carpenter Shop." It is delightful to follow in the footsteps of the boy Jesus and watch his development and see how he absorbed the transactions of the day and later translated them into wonderful parables and beautiful stories. This is a series of sermons on the life of Christ in a most interesting style. The evening service at 7:47 the sermon is about the "Night Rider." You hear much these days about the night riders, with approvals and condemnations, but this "Night Rider" was 100 per cent loyal and delivered the goods, with no objectionable features attached.

TRINITY LUTHERAN—Fairview avenue, William H. Hetrick, D. D., pastor. Sunday school, 10 A. M. Morning worship, with sermon, 11 A. M.; sermon, "Keep Up Your Courage." How this can be done successfully will be shown. Luther League, 6:45, subject, "A Prayer Psalm." Leader, Miss Gertrude Shoen. Evening worship with sermon, 7:45; sermon, "Crossing the Jordan."

EVANGELICAL, South Connellsville. Clowell E. Miller, pastor. Sunday school, 9:30; worship, 10:30; Message Bearers' meeting, 7:30 P. M. There will be no E. L. C. E., 6:45. At 7:45 o'clock the Gibson High School, including the students and the members of the faculty, will attend in a body the baccalaureate service. The sermon will be delivered by the pastor. The members of the high school will assemble at the high school building at 7:30 and will march to the church.

E. anniversary meeting in the auditorium at 6:30 P. M., leader, Clyde Bielstine. In the evening at 7:30 o'clock the pastor will preach a special sermon to the members of the Christian Endeavor Society on "Tilling One's Own Land."

TRINITY EPISCOPAL PARISH HOUSE—Frederic Welham, rector. Fifth Sunday after Easter. Divine service in the morning at 11 o'clock, church school at 10 o'clock. Thursday, Ascension Day, Holy eucharist at 10 o'clock. Vestry meeting on Monday evening.

STAR JUNCTION AND FAIRVIEW METHODIST EPISCOPAL—Star Junction: Sunday school at 10 A. M. Morning worship 11 A. M. Evening service 7:30 P. M. Mid-week service Thursday, 7:30 P. M. Fairview—Tippecanoe, Pa. Sunday school and public worship 2:30 P. M. Glasses for all? Certainly. Even if you have not received a special invitation to church, why come anyhow. Don't stand back just because you are not sufficiently urged. It's the Lord's work—be a part of it. Put real pep in it. The happiness you get in church on Sunday is a tonic for the whole week.

FIRST METHODIST EPISCOPAL—Bennett M. Hutchison, minister. This congregation meets in the Cameron school hall, South Pittsburg street and Fairview while the new church is being erected. A welcome for all comers. The Sunday school meets at 9:45 A. M. Tomorrow is the day for the monthly offering in Sunday school for the building fund. The subject of the pastor's sermon at 11 A. M. will be from Mark 15, 21, "Compulsory Burdens." At the evening service, 7:30 P. M. the following from the Question Box will be considered. 1—Are the great inventions of our age a help or a hindrance to Christianity? 2—Has not the modern woman gone too far, since she has the ballot, in taking on men's ways and habits? 3—Why do not the preachers champion the cause of "labor" more fully? 4—Why do not we undertake foreign mission work? Can we be more Christian that way? Is the demand for workers greater than for funds? 5—Do you believe that Christ is really God? The Epworth League meets at 6:30 P. M. and will consider the very timely subject, "What Is Sunday For?" Wednesday evening at 7:45, the pastor presents a Bible lesson in the mid-week service.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN—J. L. Proudfit, pastor; W. P. Russell, assistant. Bible school 9:45. Morning service 11; evening service 7:30. Wednesday evening prayer meeting 7:45. Subject of the morning sermon, "Christ Judged by His Contemporaries." Few great men find their rightful place in history while they are yet alive. A lapse of time is needed for a true perspective, when friends and foes alike are dead. That was true of Christ, and yet there those of His day that adjudged Him correctly. Their estimate of Him has not been reversed by the centuries that followed. Increasingly men have come to believe it true. They exalted Him, giving Him a name above every name. There His name by universal consent flames today. In these perilously changing times, there yet remains the unchanging Christ, the same yesterday, today and forever.

HICKORY BOTTOM SCHOOL HOUSE—Services are conducted at this school house every Sunday A. M. as follows: Sunday school, 10:30 A. M. Service, 11:30 A. M. Bring your friends and your neighbors.

Evening worship 7:30 "The Art of Making Excuse." In the evening there will be a professional and recessional and anthem by the Junior choir.

CHRISTIAN — George Walker Buckner, pastor. Bible school at 9:30 A. M. Junior Christian Endeavor at 2:30 P. M. Topic "Following the Good Shepherd." Psalm 23:1-6. Leader, Jean Swartzwelder. Senior and Intermediate Christian Endeavor at 6:30 P. M. Topic, "Lessons from the Psalms." Psalm 95:1-17. Senior leader, Mary Porter. Intermediate leader, Albert Hyatt. It Hurts Our Business

LOSSES resulting from speculative ventures hurt those who deal in sound securities. That is one reason why we continually urge the public to beware of questionable investment securities. The needs of legitimate business expansion are neglected because "shady" promotions take hundreds of millions annually that should be employed in developing responsible industrial enterprises.

Every time a community or an individual puts money into some stock-jobbing concern our business suffers. The H. L. Beach Company selects carefully the securities it asks the public to buy. These stocks are sold to furnish additional capital to established commercial and industrial enterprises that have proved their ability to earn dividends and that are ready for conservative expansion. Never do we have anything to do with promoting new companies. Too often these have nothing to recommend them but a "future." All our companies have successful "pasts" upon which are estimated future development with adequate financing and experienced and honest management.

It is a matter of record that every stock sold by the H. L. Beach Company is today held by the issuing company at a price at least 25 per cent above par.

Wine Expresses Satisfaction With Outlook for Cokers in Fayette County Track Meet

Coach of Orange and Black Squad Has Faith in Ability of Boys.

EVENT FALLS ON MAY 12

Following a workout yesterday by the members of the track team which will represent the Connellsville High School at the county field meet of the Fayette County Interscholastic Athletic Association of be held at Dawson Fair Grounds next Saturday, May 12, Coach Wine expressed himself as fairly well satisfied

The boys have been running in gymnasium shoes and it is felt that once the track shoes arrive and are distributed the runners will correspondingly increase their speed As the Cokers have never been in a field meet there are no records yet established in the local institution and whatever marks are made this spring will go down as a basis on which to strive for something better in the future

McCoy has been added to the discus throwing and shot putting squad He is another husky lad who may be able to fling the weights considerable distance

Schuler is showing up as the best sprinter on the squad although Joe May thinks that when he gets his track shoes he will be able to cut down his time and give Schuler a real chase

A number of boys went to Fayette field this morning and worked out to keep their muscles in shape over the week end With only a few more days in which to make preparations for the meet, the squad will get the finishing touches

The school is yet without any real candidates for the hurdles although it is believed Lowney and Tom Smith would make good entries for those positions. That event is the only one where the Cokers might not have some real contenders

KIWANIAN BOWLERS LOSE TO GREENSBURG BY A SLIGHT MARGIN

The Kiwanis duckpin team was defeated by the Greensburg Kiwanians on the Manhattan alleys last night in a return contest. At the close of the third game the locals were 21 pins in the rear, having reduced what looked like a sure victory for Greensburg to a contest that was only settled in the last two frames of the contest

After having captured the first contest at Greensburg a week ago by 91 pins, the locals fell down miserably last night, particularly in the first game. In the third game they came back strong and were aided by a slump of the Greensburg players Tracys fine bowling won for the visitors, while Julian Rosenbaum kept the locals from being slaughtered. The third and deciding game of the series will be played in the near future on alleys to be selected later The score

Ample Power-for-Weight Gives Amazing Performance

EASILY the strong man handles the hundred-pound weight which the weaker man can scarcely lift. Just so the underpowered car falters where the full-powered Jewett performs with ease. For it is not power alone that determines performance. It is power for weight that counts.

The Paige-built Jewett has only 11½ pounds of weight for each cubic inch piston displacement. So Jewett will beat any car up any hill you choose; and accelerate 5 to 25 miles per hour in 7 seconds. These are Jewett's proofs of Jewett's abundant power for its weight And it is a sturdy, 2805-pound car—not a "light six." Would you like to try a Jewett? Say so.

"Nash Leads the World In Motor Car Value"

IF YOU expect to buy a car this spring—investigate the Nash before passing final judgment. It is a leader in all four and six cylinder American Cars. These new types of the Nash, in open and closed models serve to renew and emphasize Nash prestige as a builder of fine Motor Cars. In comfort, appearance and performance they are without parallel in their field.

Nash Manufacturing, long famed for the fine precision, and conscientious care of its shop practice has surpassed itself. Certain important engineering developments have been introduced into the Motor design and carbureter system that result in an even greater volume of power with hair-trigger responsiveness and intensified smoothness. The heavy channel steel frame of the Chassis has been strengthened to a point where it approximates the massive rigidity of a great block of metal. A further measure of safety is attained by the new Nash brake system which provides greater braking surface per pound of weight than that possessed by any other six cylinder American made car.

As your inspection travels from the minor elements of appointments you will find an artistry in design and an excellence in quality that hitherto have been exclusive to the highest priced cars.

The Connellsville Nash Company will have their Salesroom open for your inspection on or about May 15, in the Duggan Hotel Building, on West Crawford Ave.

Baseball is displacing bull fighting in Mexico where the national sport is proving too tame

She caught the inference. The gun was not an ornament. His keen, steady, dark gaze caused her vague alarm. What had once seemed cool and audacious about this cowboy was now cold and powerful and mystical. Both her instinct and her intelligence realized the steel fiber of the man's nature. As she was his employer, she had the right to demand that he should not do what was so chillingly manifest that he might do. But Madeline could not demand. She felt curiously young and weak, and the five months of western life were as if they had never been. She now had to do with a question involving human life. And the value she placed upon human life and its spiritual significance was a matter far from her cowboy's thoughts. A strange idea flashed up. Did she place too much value upon all human life? She checked that, wondering, almost horrified at herself. And then her intuition told her that she possessed a far stronger power to move these primitive men than any woman's stern rule or order.

"Stewart, I do not fully understand what you hint that Nels and his comrades might do. Please be frank with me. Do you mean Nels would shoot upon little provocation?"

"Miss Hammond, as far as Nels is concerned, shooting is now just a matter of his meeting Don Carlos' vaqueros. As for Nick Steele and Monty, they're just bad men, and looking for trouble."

"How about yourself, Stewart? Stillwell's remark was not lost upon me," said Madeline, prompted by curiosity. "Stewart, I have come to love my ranch, and I care a great deal for my—my cowboys. It would be dreadful if they were to kill anybody, or especially if one of them should be killed."

"Miss Hammond, you've changed things considerable out here, but you can't change these men. All that's needed to start them is a little trouble. And this Mexican revolution is bound to make rough times along some of the wilder passes across the border. We're in line, that's all. And the boys are getting stirred up."

"Very well, then, I must accept the inevitable. I am facing a tough time. And some of my cowboys cannot be checked much longer. But human life is not for any man to sacrifice unless in self-defense or in protecting those dependent upon him. What Stillwell and you hinted makes me afraid of Nels and Nick Steele and Monty. Cannot they be controlled? I want to feel that they will not go gunning for Don Carlos' men. I want to avoid all violence. And yet when my guests come I want to feel that they will be safe from danger or fright or even annoyance. May I not rely wholly upon you, Stewart?"

"I hope so, Miss Hammond," replied Stewart. It was an instant response, but none the less fraught with consciousness of responsibility. He waited a moment, and then, as neither Stillwell nor Madeline offered further speech, he bowed and turned down the path, his long spurs clinking in the gravel.

"Wal, wal," exclaimed Stillwell, "thet's no little job you give him, Miss Majesty."

"It was a woman's cunning, Stillwell," said Alfred. "Majesty, whatever actuated you, it was a stroke of diplomacy. Stewart has got good stuff in him. He was down and out. Well, he's made a game fight, and it looks as if he'd win. Trusting him, giving him responsibility, relying upon him, was the surest way to strengthen his hold upon himself. But, Majesty, remember, he's a composite of tiger breed and forked lightning, and don't imagine he has failed you if he gets into a fight."

CHAPTER X

Don Carlos' Vaqueros.

Early the following morning Stewart, with a company of cowboys, departed for Don Carlos' rancho. As the day wore on without any report from him, Stillwell appeared to grow more at ease; and at nightfall he told Madeline that he guessed there was now no reason for concern.

"Wal, though it's sure amazin' strange," he continued, "I've been worryin' some about how ye was goin' to fire Don Carlos. But Gene has a way of doin' things."

Next day Stillwell and Alfred decided to ride over to Don Carlos' place, taking Madeline and Florence with them, and upon the return to stop at Alfred's ranch. They started in the cool, gray dawn, and after three hours' riding, as the sun began to get bright, they entered a mesquite grove, surrounding corrals and barns, and a number of low, squat buildings and a huge, rambling structure all built of adobe and mostly crumbling to ruin. Only one green spot relieved the bald red of grounds and walls; and this evidently was made by the spring which had given both value and fame to Don Carlos' range. The approach to the house was through a wide courtyard, bare, stony, hard packed, with hitching-rails and watering-troughs in front of a long porch. Several dusty, tired horses stood with drooping heads and bridles down, their wet flanks attesting to travel just ended.

"Wal, dog-gone it, Al, if there ain't Pat Hawe's hoss I'll eat it," exclaimed Stillwell.

"What's Pat want here, anyhow?" growled Alfred.

No one was in sight; but Madeline heard loud voices coming from the house. Stillwell dismounted at the porch and stalked in at the door. Alfred leaped off his horse, helped Florence and Madeline down, and, bidding them rest and wait on the porch, he followed Stillwell.

From the corridor came the rattling of spurs, tramping of boots, and loud voices. Madeline detected Alfred's quick notes when he was annoyed: "Well, tustle back home, then," he said. The answer came, "No!" Madeline recognized Stewart's voice, and she quickly straightened up. "I won't have them in here," went on Alfred.

"Outdoors or in, they've got to be with us!" replied Stewart, sharply. "Listen, Al," came the boom of Stillwell's big voice, "now that we've butted in over hyar with the girls, you let Stewart run things."

Then a crowd of men tramped pell-mell out upon the porch. Stewart, dark-browed and somber, was in the lead. Nels hung close to him, and Madeline's quick glance saw that Nels had undergone indescribable change. The grinning, brilliant-eyed Don Carlos came jostling out beside a giant, sharp-featured man wearing a silver shield. This, no doubt, was Pat Hawe. In the background behind Stillwell and Alfred stood Nick Steele, head and shoulders over a number of vaqueros and cowboys.

"Miss Hammond, I'm sorry you came," said Stewart, bluntly. "We're in a muddle here. I've insisted that you and Flo be kept close to us. I'll explain later. If you can't stop your ears I beg you to overlook rough talk."

With that he turned to the men behind him: "Nick, take Booly, go back to Monty and the boys. Fetch out that stuff. All of it. Rustle, now!"

Stillwell and Alfred disengaged themselves from the crowd to take up positions in front of Madeline and Florence. Pat Hawe leaned against a post and insolently ogled Madeline and then Florence. Don Carlos pressed forward. His swarthy face showed dark lines, like cords; under the surface. His little eyes were exceedingly prominent and glittering. To Madeline his face seemed to be a bold, handsome mask through which his eyes piercingly betrayed the evil nature of the man.

He bowed low with elaborate and clamous grace. His smile revealed brilliant teeth, enhanced the brilliance of his eyes. He slowly spread deprecatory hands.

"Senoritas, I beg a thousand pardons," he said. How strange it was for Madeline to hear English spoken in a soft, whiningly sweet accent! "The gracious hospitality of Don Carlos has passed with his house."

Stewart stepped forward and, thrusting Don Carlos aside, he called, "Make way, there!"

The crowd fell back to the tramp of heavy boots. Cowboys appeared staggering out of the corridor with long boxes. These they placed side by side upon the floor of the porch.

"Now, Hawe, we'll proceed with our business," said Stewart. "You see these boxes, don't you?"

"I reckon I see a good many things round hyar," replied Hawe, meaningly.

"Well, do you intend to open these boxes upon my say-so?"

"No!" retorted Hawe. "It's not my place to meddle with property as come by express an' all accounted for regular."

"I'll open them. Here, one of you boys, knock the tops off these boxes," ordered Stewart. "No, not you, Monty. You use your eyes. Let Booly handle the ax. Rustle, now!"

Monty Price had jumped out of the crowd into the middle of the porch. The manner in which he gave way to Booly and faced the vaqueros was not significant of friendliness or trust.

"Stewart, you're dead wrong to bust open them boxes. That's ag'in' the law," protested Hawe, trying to interfere.

Stewart pushed him back. Then Don Carlos, who had been stunned by the appearance of the boxes, suddenly became active in speech and person. Stewart thrust him back also. The Mexican's excitement increased. He wildly gesticulated; he exclaimed shrilly in Spanish. When, however, the lids were wrenched open and an inside packing torn away he grew rigid and silent. Madeline raised herself behind Stillwell to see that the boxes were full of rifles and ammunition.

"There, Hawe! What did I tell you?" demanded Stewart. "I came over here to take charge of this ranch. I found these boxes hidden in an unused room. I suspected what they were. Contraband goods!"

"Wal, supposin' they are? I don't see any call for sech all-fired fuss as you're makin', Stewart. I calkilate you're some stuck on your new job an' want to make a big show before—"

"Hawe, stop slinging that kind of talk," interrupted Stewart. "You got too free with your mouth once before! Now here, I'm supposed to be consulting an officer of the law. Will you take charge of these contraband goods?"

"Say, you're holdin' on high an' mighty," replied Hawe, in astonishment that was plainly pretended. "What're you drivin' at?"

Stewart muttered an imprecation. He took several swift strides across the porch; he held out his hands to Stillwell as if to indicate the hopelessness of intelligent and reasonable arbitration; he looked at Madeline with a glance eloquent of his regret that he could not handle the situation to please her. Then as he wheeled he came face to face with Nels, who had slipped forward out of the crowd.

Madeline gathered serious import from the steel-blue meaning flash of eyes whereby Nels communicated something to Stewart. Whatever that something was, it dispelled Stewart's impatience. A slight movement of his hand brought Monty Price forward with a jump. In these sudden jumps of Monty's there was a suggestion of restrained ferocity. Then Nels and Monty lined up behind Stewart. It was a deliberate action, even to Madeline, unmistakably formidable. Pat Hawe's face took on an ugly look; his eyes had a reddish gleam. Don Carlos added a pale face and extreme nervousness to his former expressions of agitation. The cowboys edged away from the vaqueros and the bronzed, bearded horsemen who were evidently Hawe's assistants.

"I'm driving at this," spoke up Stewart, presently; and now he was slow and caustic. "Here's contraband of war! Hawe, do you get that? Arms and ammunition for the rebels across the border! I charge you as an officer to confiscate these goods and to arrest the smuggler—Don Carlos."

These words of Stewart's precipitated a riot among Don Carlos and his followers, and they surged wildly around the sheriff. The crowd around Don Carlos grew louder and denser with the addition of armed vaqueros and bare-footed stable-boys and dusty-booted herdsmen and blanketed Mexicans, the last of whom suddenly slipped from doors and windows and round corners. Shrill cries, evidently from Don Carlos, somewhat quieted the commotion. Then Don Carlos could be heard addressing Sheriff Hawe in an exhortation of mingled English and Spanish. He denied, he avowed, he proclaimed, and all in rapid, passionate utterance.

It seemed to Madeline that Don Carlos denied knowledge of the boxes of contraband goods, then knowledge of their real contents, then knowledge of their destination, and, finally, everything except that they were there in sight, damning witnesses to somebody's complicity in the breaking of neutrality laws. Passionate as had been his denial of all this, it was as nothing compared to his denunciation of Stewart.

"Senor Stewart, he keel my vaquero!" shouted Don Carlos, as, sweating and spent, he concluded his arraignment of the cowboy. "Him you must arrest! Senor Stewart a bad man! He keel my vaquero!"

"Do you hear thet?" yelled Hawe. "The Don's got you figgered for thet little job at El Cajon last fall."

Just Arrived

More car than you though possible for $1165

IT'S just arrived, this good-looking, impressive, new Auburn 6-43 — a thorough quality automobile, of low first cost and unusually moderate operating expense.

It will not impress you as a small or light car. The body is full width and full length. It's as comfortable and as good-looking as any six costing several hundred dollars more.

This car is powered with the best and most efficient six cylinder motor that Continental ever built. Speed! It has all you want, and wonderful performance on the hills. Its pick-up and spirit delight you in traffic. It is as silent as the night.

An Aeroplane Type Body

The body frame of this car is built like an aeroplane frame — of laminated wood bent to shape. It is strongly ironed and will stay squeak-proof and rattle-proof for years. The body is further protected by an oversize chassis frame. Big six inch channels that assure rigidity.

Wonderful Ease of Riding

The springs are the same length as those on much larger cars. The shackles have been designed to provide a snubbing effect. The unsprung weight has been reduced as much as possible. The car fairly floats down the road.

Real Auburn Beauty

The 6-43 is built on the lines of the other Auburn sixes, known everywhere as one of the best looking cars on the market. It is beautifully hand finished in Brewster Green. It has real leather upholstery and fittings of the finest type.

The Touring-Sedan

The 6-43 Touring-Sedan is beautifully upholstered and finished and is wonderfully comfortable. Equipped with a touring trunk at the rear.

This new 6-43 Auburn is now at our show rooms. You will say as thousands have, that it is the finest car in its class — a class that gets constantly more popular

6—43 Touring	$1165
6—43 Sport Model	$1275
6—43 Touring Sedan	$1535

Freight and War Tax Extra

Left: The laminated wood body frame is made of thin sheets of wood glued together and bent, not cut, to shape. This is the way aeroplane frames are built for war use.

At the Theatres

THE PARAMOUNT.

OUT OF THE DUST one of the finest drama produced in many month, provides splendid entertainment today at this theatre Russell Simpson does so excellent acting as the army captain Little Pat Moore does some of the best work that has been done on the screen by a child. Her childish weakness in suffering over the illness of his mother and his patriotic efforts to explain it all in her own small fashion is one of the outstanding feature of the picture

Monday and Tuesday Ladder Jinx will be shown

THE SOISSON.

CHOOL DAYS a clean wholesome and refreshing production with Wesley Barry the freckled faced screen comedian in the starring role is the drawing attraction today This the story deals with a small town boy, who through the good graces of a wealthy uncle is sent to a private school in the east All the pranks that he performs among his small rural friends, he also performing among his wealthy circle But to tell you the story in full would be spoiling your entertainment The cast is excellent the picture is a screen classic Don't fail to see this wonderful comedy!

THE ORPHEUM.

'PINK GODS showing today at this theatre presents Bebe Daniels the popular Paramount actress in the stellar role This is a story of the South African diamond mines and illustrates the lure these gems known as pink god has for the average woman The heroine played by Leb Daniels got into serious trouble because of her love for diamonds and in the development of a highly dramatic story many thrills are experienced

THE SOISSON.

SAFETY LAST —Harold Lloyds latest feature comedy will be on view four days beginning Monday of next week at this theatre

A thrill-a minute laught-a second comedy!

The first seven reel comedy ever produced!

And Harold Lloyd is the Prince of Sky Larkers with the sky no limit!

All that and more is promised in 'Safety Last It is a feature comedy that is based on a firm foundation just as the twelve story building that Harold Lloyd climbs is built on a firm foundation The comedy and the building would both have to be —for the gales of laughter that Harold turns loose are enough to rock either

He causes funny laugh glands and frozen faces to blow up and set off bombs of mirth for miles around He attaches an infectious fuse of joy to the diaphragm and he doesn't have to wait long for the explosion It is inevitable

Put outstanding thrills of all the serials ever produced together and they would probably—end to end—reach from the Atlantic to the Pacific but they would not give such hairable, hair-raising laughable, mirth-raising moments of hilarious thrills as are contained in 'Safety Last"

'Safety Last" also tells a delightfully human story—the romance of a boy and a girl It shows what havoc a little white lie—all for the cause of cupid—can cause There are scenes in a department store that are rich with satire In fact "Safety Last' brings laughter first that lasts forever after

THE ORPHEUM.

'ROBIN HOOD —Douglas Fairbanks great screen sensation, will open next Monday at this theatre for a four-day showing,

'Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood represents a real literature of the screen, genuine and historically accurate in costume and setting, and truthful in every small detail as well as in important basis

It blends facts and fantasy history and legend and combines the glories of poetic and artistic beauty with an authoritative interpretation of the spirit of romance and adventure prevailing in the Twelfth Century

It gives a vividly real impression of the romance, the conflict of emotions and the aspirations which made so memorable the period in which Richard the Lion hearted" ruled

It presents a clear view of the fundamentals that actuated the leaders of thought and action of a time when the spirit of chivalry dominated as never before nor since

It visualizes the drama of life and its living when Robin Hood was continued by supreme tests of his admirable valor in behalf of the Maid Marian and the downtrodden unfortunate victims of a feudal age

It gives above all, the utmost in entertainment replete with all those qualities of enthralling drama, breathtaking, mysteries and whole some revelling diverting, humor

It is a screen replica as nearly accurate a humanly possible presenting a presentation of life and its environments in those days of knighthood

It presents an historical background cleaned with dangers from all evil records in months of the most exhaustive research both in this country and abroad that ever has been devoted to any cause
